| Go Club at the University of Hawaii                                                        | 9/05/25  | 9/30/25 | The GO Club at the University of Hawaii is a club providing a platform for students to explore the world of Go. By participating in the Go Club, students can improve their Go skills, make new friends, and enjoy the game of Go. The club encourages collaboration, friendly competition, and the exploration of Go's rich history and culture.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Leisure/Recreational  | Chloe McNary             | chloemc@hawaii.edu  |
| Gold Humanism Honor Society                                                                | 9/05/25  | 9/30/25 | The John A. Burns School of Medicine (JABSON) endeavors to facilitate the growth of competent, compassionate, culturally sensitive, and socially responsible physicians. The strengthening of personal attributes such as integrity, compassion, altruism, respect, excellence, and empathy is essential to this process. JABSON promotes these humanistic tasks throughout the four-year medical school curriculum. Humanistic values are also reflected by faculty and residents in clinical teaching experiences. The Award of Gold Humanism Honors Society (GHHS) Chapter at JABSON is a natural extension to further establish a vision of exceptional humanistic attributes. GHHS members serve as leaders and role models for the entire JABSON student body.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | Academic/Professional | D-Dai Wong               | ddaiw@hawaii.edu    |
| Graduate Student Sociological Association                                                  | 10/1/25  | 9/30/25 | The GSASA provides a safe space for graduate students to present the ideas, interests, and concerns of the members of the student body and serves as a liaison between the students, faculty, and administration. The GSASA facilitates communication and involvement among students through scheduled meetings, coordination of social and educational activities, and dissemination of necessary information. The GSASA is an organization that provides students with opportunities to promote sociology within both the university and Hawaii community at large through research, education, and mentoring. Another goal of the group is to provide support and guidance for incoming students and link students in the sociology graduate program with other students and sociology professionals locally, nationally, and internationally.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Academic/Professional | Matthew Kahu             | mkahu@hawaii.edu    |
| Graduate Women in Science Hawaii                                                           | 9/05/25  | 9/30/25 | Our mission is to support and honor the past, present, and future women scientists of Hawaii and the Pacific Region. We aim to unite academic disciplines and diverse backgrounds in celebrating women, girls, non-binary and gender non-conforming folks in their personal and professional endeavors as scientists, individuals, and community members. To this end, we provide a collaborative network of inspired and practicing scientists, professional development to strengthen women's contributions to science, and a community presence to nurture the leaders of tomorrow.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | Academic/Professional | Linnea Wozniak           | linneaw@hawaii.edu  |
| Hawaii Branch of the American Society of Microbiology Student Chapter                      | 10/23/25 | 9/30/25 | The Society's mission is to promote and advance the microbial sciences. ASM is a global scientific society whose goals are to shape the future of the microbial sciences, connect microbial sciences stakeholders worldwide, and ensure appropriate societal impact of the microbial sciences. ASM is committed to providing and advancing the microbial sciences through the elevation, embodiment, and sustainability of inclusion diversity with equity, access, and accountability (IEEASA).                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Academic/Professional | Stiana Correa            | stiana@hawaii.edu   |

Richardson School of Law serves the local legal community by providing an elite academic forum for legal scholarship in Hawaii and the Pacific, and contributes to the national discourse on emerging legal issues through the publication of compelling legal writing. First organized in 1978, the University of Hawaii Law Review is a student-run organization that publishes Hawaii's leading journal of legal scholarship authored by contributors from the legal community, including law professors, judges, lawyers, and law students. The Law Review produces two issues annually, published by the University of Hawaii Summer. Each issue contains content that is on the cutting edge of legal scholarship, and addresses topics of great importance and interest to our legal community. Articles have been published relating to Law &amp; Hawaii, Environment and Energy Law, Native Hawaiian and other Indigenous Peoples, and Racial and Social Justice. Articles published in the University of Hawaii Law Review are often cited by scholars and practitioners, both in the State of Hawaii and throughout the United States. In addition to written publications, the Law Review launched its very own podcast - Hawaii Law. Established in Fall 2002, Hawaii Law brings together esteemed guests from all backgrounds to discuss legal issues facing our state. |                       |                          |                     |

Our mission is to support the spiritual growth of Chinese speaking and international students through Bible study, worship, prayer, and small group discussions. In addition, we seek to foster cross-cultural friendships by hosting outreach events, service activities, and cultural exchanges that encourage mutual understanding and care for the wider campus community.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | Religious/Spiritual   | Quan Zhang               | quan1@hawaii.edu    |

This is a national collegiate honor society for students in their senior year. Each chapter is typically composed of only a handful of carefully selected applicants for the year - the UH Pi Kapa Chapter usually does not exceed 25 members at a time. Potential members are chosen based on how they measure in accord with Mortar Board's key values: scholarship, leadership, and service. Those who excel in said values are then carefully examined through a series of interviews hosted by the chapter's current members. It is a great opportunity to give back to the community and form close friendships with our Mortar Board members.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |                       |                          |                     |
| Mortar Board National Honor Society Hui Pihonika Chapter at the University of Hawaii at Manoa                 | 11/2/25  | 9/30/26 | This honor society is more than just prestige, but rather, an opportunity for university undergraduates senior to make a local impact in their campus and community before they graduate. Once inducted in Mortar Board, every member will engage in various community service and philanthropic activities. We not only help support each other and the UH community through various events but also aim, we are making a global impact by building and growing the local legacies of tomorrow.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | Honorary Society      | Kayla Mahina             | kamahina@hawaii.edu |

As a Campus Chapter under the National Marine Corps Program (NINPi), we aim to give the homeless donor equity and respect access to life-saving treatments. Members of our Chapter have the opportunity to interact with others who share a passion for this cause and gain non-clinical volunteering (service) hours, while making a meaningful difference. The club's students build skills in leadership, decision-making, and teamwork. Through regular group activities, the club is a student-run program located at the UH Manoa School of Medicine whose mission is to provide students with the opportunity to gain greater exposure to the scientific, clinical and service aspects of oncology, help improve outcomes in oncology and its sub-specialties such as radiation oncology, pediatric oncology, surgical oncology, and geriatric oncology.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Academic/Professional | Kaveri Henshaw           | ah@hawaii.edu       |

The primary goals of the PMO are to help students succeed in college, gain real-world academic potential, and prepare for professional school. PMO prepares students for lifelong learning and leadership roles through peer mentorship and volunteerism. We also aim to help students to gain a healthy and happy living through offering weekly meditation sessions.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Academic/Professional | Emi Okura                | emiohara@hawaii.edu |

| State General International (SGI) Club at the University of Hawaii at Manoa         | 9/30/25  | 9/30/26 | The fundamental purpose of SGI Club is to help students unlock their hidden potential and achieve creative harmony with their environment through the philosophy and practice of Native Buddhism in the HIGI Club. This is the ultimate expression of individual empowerment – that each student can transform the inevitable challenges of daily life into sources of growth and fulfillment and become a positive influence in his or her school, workplace, family and community. By promoting an understanding of how Native Buddhism can be applied to the challenges of modern living, our activities contribute to the development of peace, culture and education within society, inspire respect for cultural diversity and human rights, and encourage the development of a more harmonious world.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Academic/Professional | Kimura Ager           | kimura@hawaii.edu    |

On occasion, State Society will manufacture the stiles across all major if requested, however, we do have the ability to deny said request if not adequate. The main objective is the production of stiles for CTAHR graduates. The proceeds generated from stiles created by State Society supplement scholarships and events for the Fashion Design and Merchandising (FDM) students, and for members of the organization. State Society aims to foster positive relationships through the FDM community with organized club activities that include, but are not limited to, manufacturing stiles, home academic events, inspirational educational trips, etc. State Society also aids with coordinating fundraiser events, assisting in the necessary operational functions of FDM's annual fashion show, and promoting the FDM program at the University of Hawaii at Manoa. | Academic/Professional | Leahna Tava           | leahna@hawaii.edu    |

We are reaching 2,500 feet max altitude, while providing students with valuable hands-on experience in a professional engineering project environment. The purpose of this project is to foster teamwork, problem-solving, and technical growth. The team also strives to build community, represent Hawaii in the rocky field, and inspire future University of Hawaii at Manoa students to pursue ambitious projects of their own. Looking ahead, the team plans to participate in the Friends of Anahulu Ruckshuck (FAR) Outdoors Unlimited Tournament (OUT) at the FAR Launch Site in the Mauna Kea Desert, California during June 2026, continuing its tradition of representing Hawaii on a national stage.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | Academic/Professional | Adam Lee              | adam@hawaii.edu      |

| University Students of Urban and Regional Planning                          | 10/21/25 | 9/30/25 | University Students of Urban and Regional Planning (USURP) is a departmental student council comprised of Department of Urban and Regional Planning (DURP) students. The council meets to discuss the needs of the students in efforts to discover resources and solutions that would help improve the student experience. Networking opportunities are a key component for USURP discussions because we find it important to link students with APA members and future employers. Students on the council are typically second-year students with insight on the program, the field, and the ability to study on campus and the programs available to UH students.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Academic/Professional | Loamalia Talavase   | ltalavase@hawaii.edu   |

Along with offering college visits at other established universities, our VICA Hawaii team recruits student volunteers, collects donations, and raises funds to participate in volunteer-based medical, dental, and veterinary clinics. VICA's current focus is to help impoverished communities in Guatemala, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica, and will often collaborate with local ministry of health officials, schools, and local community leaders. We will organize trips to one or more of these Central American countries each academic year. Along with providing free basic medical, dental, and veterinary care, students will have the opportunity to participate in community public health projects that aim to educate and improve the quality of life in these under-served areas.                                                                |                       |                     |                        |
